++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Cloudy tonight with patchy rain for some.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloud will thicken this evening and persist overnight. Alongside this cloud there will be some outbreaks of patchy rain at times, especially for eastern areas. It will be a milder night than the last few, remaining largely frost-free. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Wednesday:
After a cloudy start with further patchy rain possible, it will become dry with sunny spells for southern areas and clear skies across Cumbria. Feeling slightly colder than recently. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Staying fine and dry throughout the period, with plenty of sunny spells and patchy fair-weather cloud. Becoming quite warm again by day, but overnight frosts are still possible.
